The British freight steamer Iperia, bound for New York with a cargo of dates, grounded on a sandbar off Seaside Heights, near Toms River, about 9 o'clock this morning. Her captain had lost his way in the heavy fog that obscured the coast.

Life guards from Station 109 week

Life guards from Station 109 went out to the vessel. They report there is no sea and she is not in danger. She probably will be floated with little trouble when wrecking tugs get to the The crew will remain aboar

The Iperia is a vessel of 3,233 tons 340 feet long. On her way from India she was in collision with the Norwegian sailing vessel Svalen and put in to the Azores for repairs.

aptly describes the alternating tones MONTEREY, Mexico, June 14.—Congained by running the grain of the fur firmation has been received here of the recent report that oil has been dis-covered on the island of Baredito, situ-ated just off the port of Altata, on the Pacific coast of Mexico. According to original well has a flow of several thousand barrels a day. It is of the gusher type, and the fact that it was brought in at shallow depth leads to the belief that still greater production may be obtained by deeper drilling, just as is the case in the Tampico region. Japanese interests have se-cured large oil lease acreage upon region bordering the Gulf of Cali-fornia, it is stated. The discovery well
